The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

So, to be clear, are you acknowledging your initial tweet was incorrect and that the earlier version of the model did explicitly account for the lockdowns?

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

1/ Look, I get why people were so scared three or four weeks ago. I was too. But now - for the media to ignore the real demographics and scare people with outlier cases - to ignore the mostly empty hospitals all over the country - to pretend that the models weren't wrong...

Unemployment will stay through the roof as [illegible] $600 supplement through July 31 cripples small businesses long after covid19 is a memory. Few will be willing to work for significantly less than they make on their couch. Much bigger threat to businesses than covid19 ever was!

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM

5/ Here's a link to the paper (thoughtfully provided by the Times) so you can read and judge it for yourself.

[redacted]

I don't understand the point of trying to drive panic with stories that are so misleading - and, frankly, so easily checked.

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease “caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death.” Confirmed lab tests are not required...

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

5/ One last point here: Ferguson gives the lockdown credit, which is interesting - the UK only began ita lockdown 2 days ago, and the theory is that lockdowns take 2 weeks or more to work.

6/ Not surprisingly, this testimony has received no attention in the US - I found it only in UK papers. Team Apocalypse is not interested.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

1/ So I think this is a really excellent, non-hysterical thread on the real potential dangers of #C... - ...@JDVance1 is smart and thoughtful - and it highlights yet again why we must have widespread serological testing as soon as possible.

2/ I would make a couple of points - it glides over just how concentrated the excess mortality risk appears to be in the very old and sick.Why isn't our focus on protecting THOSE folks rather than going immediately to lockdowns - which are hugely destructive by any measure?

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. #DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine
@GovMikeDeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

As an Ohioan, I am so disgusted with how this whole thing has been handled. They bought Acton's "act" hook-line-and-sinker. When will DeWine realize that the stupid exec orders are no longer necessary & get Ohio back to work? Probably never, he is drunk on the praise over this!

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

Dear Alex,
I have been a practicing physician for 25 years. I have reviewed research and other facts about COVID-19 and am troubled by misinformation and speculation. Like other corona viruses and influenza viruses that may cause respiratory illness, it is a global concern. However, >99% of people with COVID-19 will recover. Primarily people with severe baseline lung disease, immunocompromise, and/or very elderly age will be adversely affected, and some will die. Keeping perspective around this: H1N1 (swine flu) in 2009-2010 affected 1.5B people, with approximately 300,000-700,000 deaths. Each year about 350,000-600,000 people die from the flu (about 900-1,600

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. #DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

Unemployment will stay through the roof as [illegible] $600 supplement through July 31 cripples small businesses long after covid19 is a memory. Few will be willing to work for significantly less than they make on their couch. Much bigger threat to businesses than covid19 ever was!

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Seguir

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

12 168 609

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 de abr.

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ Dr. Fair: I try not to get involved in the practice of medicine - that's for physicians - but I have to say I find it odd and worrisome you would be housed in a ward for #SARSCoV2-positive patients without a positive test. At my wife's hospital (and others I know of)...

2/ Precautions are taken to separate positive and negative patients, and presumptive patients who test negative are removed from coronavirus units. The goal is to keep them from becoming infected, which seems especially important in the case of people with respiratory infections.

Therein lies the problem. We really need a public M&M conference to show most everything about Covid19 is controversial in the medical/scientific community. Fauci really is not the end all, and that does not mean he is necessarily doing a bad, or corrupt job. Just 1 mans POV

Frank Lentine @FrankSLentine · 5h
The #1 thing I blame the President for is abdicating to these people who have admittedly narrow scopes of expertise. Once Fauci told the press what they wanted to hear, that genie wasn't going back in the bottle. A different guy would have learned more himself and controlled it.

They're looking for it, so they can stamp it out. Pretty hard to run a pandemic when you have to play whack-a-mole with people spewing facts.

Just to check: how many guilty people need to die to equal one innocent person? And how many non-COVID deaths from overdoses of people who couldn't get to NA meetings, untreated strokes, etc, equal one COVID death? Because we all know coronavirus deaths count way more!

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under Investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

2/ Precautions are taken to separate positive and negative patients, and presumptive patients who test negative are removed from coronavirus units. The goal is to keep them from becoming infected, which seems especially important in the case of people with respiratory infections.

Enough people are going to start homeschooling that the school bonds will default. Oh well, should've thought about the political risk you were creating trying to intervene in every interaction a kid will ever have.

I've wondered why more parents haven't investigated homeschooling at this point. Kids learn more, learn more quickly, have fun, have more free time. Zoom, internet not needed. Lots of hands on, outdoor time, field trips. It's nothing like this school at home mess.

Interesting data from @Tesla @elonmusk, which can track how often drivers are charging its cars: use is back to normal in China (the bottom was early February) and has recovered about 50% in the US from the April low.

1/ I want to highlight a subtle but crucial dynamic of lockdowns that could explain why politicians like @GovWhitmer are so reluctant to buckle to reality and open up. Two factors drive the dynamic, one relatively well-understood and the other less so...

2/ The first is that outside of NYC, states appear to have imposed the lockdowns relatively early in the cycle of ; the serology studies generally suggest that fewer than 10 percent of people (sometimes 5 percent) had been infected as of a month ago...

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · May 7

3/ What this means is that as soon as we open up, we're back in mid-March. This is a medium-sized medical problem - the NY experience suggests that even under the worst-case scenario hospitals will not be overrun, and we should be able to do a better job protecting seniors now...

12 36 337

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · May 7

4/ And as we all know (including the governors), the real risk is to seniors - especially in congregate facilities like nursing homes. But for the lockdown governors, it is a HUGE political problem, because if all the lockdowns did was delay the inevitable spread...

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

So they want to release inmates from jail and jail citizens who go out but, are still 6+ feet away from others. This is great optics.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

@AlexBerenson

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942

You had me at "my shrink asked me." Coming tomorrow: another week of new unemployment claims. Figure this'll get us over 35 million! But you do you, my blue-check friend.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

So they want to release inmates from jail and jail citizens who go out but, are still 6+ feet away from others. This is great optics.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 4% overall.

From Minnesota. The median age of the 29 people there who died from #COVID? 86. Including a 69-year-old who had just gone through a double lung transplant.

17 of the 29 lived in long-term care facilities.

Minnesota remains on indefinite lockdown.

2/ I would make a couple of points - it glides over just how concentrated the excess mortality risk appears to be in the very old and sick.Why isn't our focus on protecting THOSE folks rather than going immediately to lockdowns - which are hugely destructive by any measure?

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

@pbump Philip Bump

A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The Seriously, one of the Tesla drivers I know here inquired about how to disinfect her housekeeper. And they bullied people for going to the hospital to get IV therapy.

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

1/ So I think this is a really excellent, non-hysterical thread on the real potential dangers of #[illegible] - [illegible]1 is smart and thoughtful - and it highlights yet again why we must have widespread serological testing as soon as possible.

3/ And while acknowledging the economic crisis, Vance more or less throws up his hands, saying that it would have happened anyway. But the difference between voluntary social distancing and what we have now is the distance between recession and depression. That's no exaggeration.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. #DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine
@GovMikeDeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

1,042 2:21 PM · Mar 22, 2020

886 people are talking about this

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

1/ Look, I get why people were so scared three or four weeks ago. I was too. But now - for the media to ignore the real demographics and scare people with outlier cases - to ignore the mostly empty hospitals all over the country - to pretend that the models weren't wrong...

2/ And to refuse to ask really hard questions about what that means about them and the efficacy or lack thereof of the lockdowns - to refuse to ask for hard metrics we will use to reopen the country...

3/ It doesn't feel like panic is driving this anymore. It feels like people just won't admit what's happening.

And we cannot afford that - not with unemployment headed to its worst levels since the Depression, not with children denied school and our rights under siege.

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 apr

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

I wanted to believe this was a joke or a hoax - @raleighpolice calling a protest a "non-essential activity" and arresting someone for speaking out against the state's lockdown. But it is as real as Stalin.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

Denying kids school harms them educational and socially.

Kids are at near zero risk - far less than the flu - from coronavirus.

We will have no V-shaped economic recovery - and little recovery at all - without working schools.

3/ I wonder if a historian on US federal/state/local relationships could point to the last time power struggles were this overt: the 1950s and 1960s in the South, when the feds finally forced an end to segregation? But even that was more fed/state than state/local.

Let me boil down this poetic @nytimes tale of the coronavirus: woman, 33, is infected with #SARSCoV2, goes to ER, is discharged (she's notably nonspecific on her length of stay), recovers.

It feels like people are trying to make things that are otherwise expected with severe upper respiratory infections, somehow unique to this particular disease. A bad URI will often cause issues that linger for weeks, sometimes months after you are no longer sick.

1/ Meanwhile, the situation in Illinois is getting more volatile. The statewide sheriffs' association last night sharply criticized , though it didn't quite come out and refuse to enforce the lockdown.

Statement of the Illinois Sheriffs' Association:

"Illinois Sheriffs have been elected by their local citizens to keep their communities safe, a trust that every sheriff and sworn law enforcement officer holds dear. It is outrageous that the Governor is threatening retaliation against these leaders and the men and women of their offices. He is insulting heroic police officers, corrections officers and local voters."

The Governor again indicated that local law enforcement will face consequences for their statements about how they view the enforceability of his executive orders. Apparently, these consequences now include the threat of litigation and loss of funding, including funding that has been designated through the Federal Cares Act that was designated to units of local government. The Governor and his office have repeatedly talked about consulting organizations/groups of impacted experts on issues as they arise. Unfortunately, one of the groups that has never been included are the Sheriffs of this State, nor its representative organization, the Illinois Sheriffs' Association. It is extremely frustrating to hear these continued comments in response to those that may not agree with his positions. Sheriffs were elected by their counties to keep them safe and they will continue to do so.

2/ The semi-legitimate one: making everyone wear masks theoretically lessens the stigma for sick people to wear them, and thus makes compliance by the sick more likely.

The ugly one: masks give governors who want to end lockdowns an excuse - look, we figured out masks work.

3/ The really ugly one: masks are a form of social control, and the lockdown governors have learned to love social control; they are an easy way to shame anyone who does not agree that #COVID is very, very dangerous, and very special rules are needed...

4/ As an added bonus, to the extent masks work at all, one reason may be that under normal circumstances they DO signal sick people, and thus encourage healthy people to remain at a distance; requiring them to be worn universally ruins that signal and thus makes them less useful.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. #DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

1/ Look, I get why people were so scared three or four weeks ago. I was too. But now - for the media to ignore the real demographics and scare people with outlier cases - to ignore the mostly empty hospitals all over the country - to pretend that the models weren't wrong...

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ And to refuse to ask really hard questions about what that means about them and the efficacy or lack thereof of the lockdowns - to refuse to ask for hard metrics we will use to reopen the country...

3/ It doesn't feel like panic is driving this anymore. It feels like people just won't admit what's happening.

And we cannot afford that - not with unemployment headed to its worst levels since the Depression, not with children denied school and our rights under siege.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · ١٠ أبريل

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · ١٠ أبريل

5/ At the very least, the media needs to STOP presenting a hugely misleading (to be polite - fictional would be more accurate) picture of the mortality risks

Washington State shuts down its COVID field hospital. Total patient count: Zero. The move is ""aimed at helping another state with a more significant need..." Good luck with that.

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

12 168 609

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · api. 10

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

Yup- rate is 4x what it was down here in FL for domestic abuse according to some police officers I know and also- why isn't anyone questioning the fact that we have all sorts of new commercials out with facemasks yet we are on quarantine. How are they filming them?

So many innocent people are going to die! And some guilty people too, maybe? (I'm assuming he means from [illegible], not drunk driving, almost certainly a bigger risk for the average bargoer.) Just check back in two weeks! Just like Georgia, amirite, [illegible]?

Just to check: how many guilty people need to die to equal one innocent person? And how many non-COVID deaths from overdoses of people who couldn't get to NA meetings, untreated strokes, etc, equal one COVID death? Because we all know coronavirus deaths count way more!

I wanted to believe this was a joke or a hoax - @raleighpolice calling a protest a "non-essential activity" and arresting someone for speaking out against the state's lockdown. But it is as real as Stalin.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

2/ The number comes from a March 19 SCCM paper:

More importantly: this is everyone who may need ventilation OVER THE COURSE OF THE EPIDEMIC...

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules "are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not."

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

1/ [redacted] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [redacted] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

Is it too late to cancel the ventilator orders? As furniture goes they're pretty expensive. And not that attractive.

Coronavirus

Cuomo on plan to take ventilators: We're not in the position that we were in that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

As an Ohioian, I am so disgusted with how this whole thing has been handled. They bought Acton's "act" hook-line-and-sinker. When will DeWine realize that the stupid exec orders are no longer necessary & get Ohio back to work? Probably never, he is drunk on the praise over this!

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942

Wow. So this is a non-random sample and only one data point, but at a testing site in Chicago 30-50% of people are testing positive for CV antibodies (meaning they have already had the virus). WE NEED WIDESPREAD ANTIBODY TESTING.

Roseland Hospital phlebotomist: 30% of those tested have coronavirus antibody

By Staff reports |

Community Hospital said Thursday that 30% to 50% of patients tested for the coronavirus have antibodies while only around 10% to 20% of those tested have the active virus.

Sumaya Owaynat, a phlebotomy technician, said she tests between 400 and 600 patients on an average day in the parking lot at Roseland Community Hospital. Drive-thru testing is from 9 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m. each day. However, the hospital has a limited number of tests they can give per day.

Owaynat said the number of patients coming through the testing center who appear to have

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

The [illegible] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Reminder: this model and its friend from @imperialcollege are two of the main reasons that schools are closed, the economy is in free fall, and people who go outside to paddleboard are being arrested (!).

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

This should be front-page news everywhere. Wonder why it's not.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson
New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

١١ · ١٤٢ · ٥٥١

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

١٢ · ١٦٨ · ٦٠٩

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · ١٠ أبريل

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So ... has a big story right now about a ... model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

1/ Meanwhile, the situation in Illinois is getting more volatile. The statewide sheriffs' association last night sharply criticized @govpritzker, though it didn't quite come out and refuse to enforce the lockdown. ilsheriff.org/wp-content/upl

...

Statement of the Illinois Sheriffs' Association:

"Illinois Sheriffs have been elected by their local citizens to keep their communities safe, a trust that every sheriff and sworn law enforcement officer holds dear. It is outrageous that the Governor is threatening retaliation against these leaders and the men and women of their offices. He is insulting heroic police officers, corrections officers and local voters."

The Governor again indicated that local law enforcement will face consequences for their statements about how they view the enforceability of his executive orders. Apparently, these consequences now include the threat of litigation and loss of funding, including funding that has been designated through the Federal Cares Act that was designated to units of local government. The Governor and his office have repeatedly talked about consulting organizations/groups of impacted experts on issues as they arise. Unfortunately, one of the groups that has never been included are the Sheriffs of this State, nor its representative organization, the Illinois Sheriffs' Association. It is extremely frustrating to hear these continued comments in response to those that may not agree with his positions. Sheriffs were elected by their counties to keep them safe and they will continue to do so.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing?

covid19.healthdata.org/projections

The charts below show projected hospital resource use based on COVID-19 deaths. The model assumes continued social distancing until the end of May 2020.

In locations without social distancing measures currently in place, we have assumed they will be in place within seven days of the last model update. If not, the number of deaths and burden on their hospital systems will likely be higher than the model predicts.

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 4% statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

1/ [redacted] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [redacted] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

Replying to [illegible]

Unemployment will stay through the roof as [illegible] $600 supplement through July 31 cripples small businesses long after covid19 is a memory. Few will be willing to work for significantly less than they make on their couch. Much bigger threat to businesses than covid19 ever was!

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

@AlexBerenson

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

08.57 - 10 Apr 2020

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

12 158 609

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 Apr

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

7/ But before we can have that debate, everyone needs to underestimate that the models didn't fail last week because they UNDERESTIMATED the effect of the lockdowns. They failed because they OVERESTIMATED the effect. Anyone who says otherwise just doesn't understand the lag.

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

5/ One last point here: Ferguson gives the lockdown credit, which is interesting - the UK only began ita lockdown 2 days ago, and the theory is that lockdowns take 2 weeks or more to work.

6/ Not surprisingly, this testimony has received no attention in the US - I found it only in UK papers. Team Apocalypse is not interested.

Because we know he's wrong... look at italy. Look at spain. The humans in those countries are not unique. it took china 2 full months of total totalitarian style lockdown to get down to levels where even their government that tried to cover this up is starting to reopen.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules “are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.”

The @IHME_UW model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The childcare insanity continues: this chain promises parents preschoolers will be "encourage(d) to wear masks" and have seen staff wear masks in "a fun, positive, and educational manner." And kids will be temperature screened at the door! Sounds like the start to a great day.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

> about 15 other CFOs
> - Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
> - Outpatient basically is a zero
> - Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
> - A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
> - No one expects to recapture everything they lost
> - Staff
>   - Not flexing yet
>   - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
>   - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
> - Longer term impact

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

We are now at a new stage. ... @DrAmyActon just signed a statewide #StayHome order for Ohioans.

Governor Mike DeWine @GovMikeDeWine

#StayHomeOhio: It does permit exceptions to staying home. Common sense exceptions: leaving for health and safety, for necessary supplies and services, for outdoor activity (walking your dog, going to a park -- although playgrounds are closed).

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

Nobody says COVID-19 is not real, that it can't tax hospitals or kill people, esp. if they are over 75 or have comorbidities. But right now the best CURRENT projection is for 61,000 US deaths. That was the 2017 flu season. Why have we shut the country?

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

At the beginning it was well known that flattening the curve would just be a temporary but necessary measure to allow our health system to catch up. Now it's become almost a religious orthodoxy - we must continue to flatten long after we are caught up or we're grandma killers.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules "are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not."

The @[redacted] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

From Minnesota. The median age of the 29 people there who died from #COVID? 86. Including a 69-year-old who had just gone through a double lung transplant.

17 of the 29 lived in long-term care facilities.

Minnesota remains on indefinite lockdown.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

Is it too late to cancel the ventilator orders? As furniture goes they're pretty expensive. And not that attractive.

Coronavirus

Cuomo on plan to take ventilators: We're not in the position that we were in

Updated 2:53 PM Today, 2.28 PV

that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost 1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

Alex Berenson

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10. 4.

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10. 4.

5/ At the very least, the media needs to STOP presenting a hugely misleading

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities

I wanted to believe this was a joke or a hoax - @raleighpolice calling a protest a "non-essential activity" and arresting someone for speaking out against the state's lockdown. But it is as real as Stalin.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

"As a society, you can't save everyone, you're gonna lose people, that's life," said Cuomo in a press briefing in soon-to-reopen Watertown, in upstate New York. "But we did everything we could."

Cuomo repeated that conscience-clearing mantra, or a close variation of it, six times in a matter of seconds when grilled specifically about a lack of diagnostic tests making it impossible for some nursing homes to comply with his new edict that all workers be

I wanted to believe this was a joke or a hoax - @raleighpolice calling a protest a "non-essential activity" and arresting someone for speaking out against the state's lockdown. But it is as real as Stalin.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

POLITICS & GOVERNMENT

Protesters rally for NC to reopen. At least one is arrested for failing to disperse.

This afternoon Colorado just cut its reported #COVID deaths by almost 25% - from 1150 to 878. covid19.colorado.gov/data/case-data number of deaths in two ways:

- The number of deaths among people with COVID-19. This represents the total number of deaths reported among people who have COVID-19, but COVID-19 may not have been the cause of death listed on the death certificate. This information is required by the CDC and is crucial for public health surveillance, as it provides more information about disease

Oh dear I try to avoid personal insults but you really are stupid. Do you know anything about medical training? Before Dr. Berenson completed her forensic fellowship she had a general residency in psychiatry. So she doesn't have to work exclusively as a forensic psychiatrist.

5/ One last point here: Ferguson gives the lockdown credit, which is interesting - the UK only began ita lockdown 2 days ago, and the theory is that lockdowns take 2 weeks or more to work.

Because we know he's wrong... look at italy. Look at spain. The humans in those countries are not unique. it took china 2 full months of total totalitarian style lockdown to get down to levels where even their government that tried to cover this up is starting to reopen.

National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

67 334 598

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Prati

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules “are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.”

Reminder: this model and its friend from [illegible] are two of the main reasons that schools are closed, the economy is in free fall, and people who go outside to paddleboard are being arrested (!).

Attention citizens! Your Dept. Of Pandemia wishes to report that, contrary to your foolish speculation, it is not drunk on power. Not even tipsy. All citizens must stop saying so immediately. Those who do not will be arrested for their own protection. Attention citizens!

1/ [redacted] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [redacted] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

59 172 422

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

From Minnesota. The median age of the 29 people there who died from #COVID? 86. Including a 69-year-old who had just gone through a double lung transplant.

17 of the 29 lived in long-term care facilities.

Minnesota remains on indefinite lockdown.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

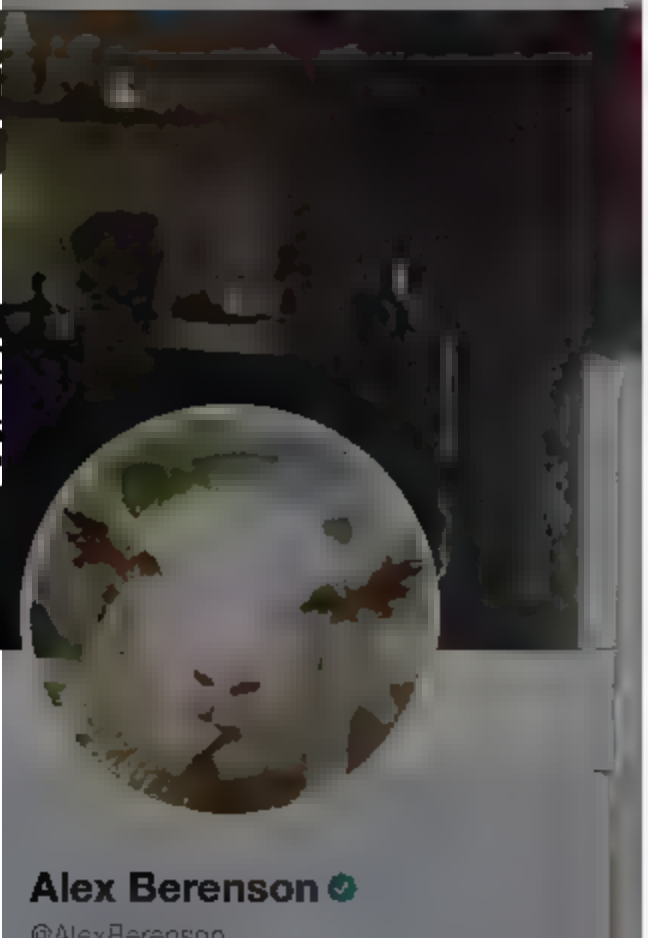
1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs



- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

New German data show that 15 percent of people in one region have already been infected with CV (remember - more infections is good news, it means the virus is less dangerous) and the fatality rate is 0.37%.

Washington State shuts down its COVID field hospital. Total patient count: Zero. The move is ""aimed at helping another state with a more significant need..." Good luck with that.
kuow.org/stories/washin …

Army field hospital for Covid-19 surge leaves Seattle after 9

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

So [redacted] has a big story right now about a [redacted] model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

1/ "There are at most 200K ventilators in the US. One million are expected to be needed." This horrifying news comes from my old employer [illegible]; it's sourced to the Society of Critical Care Medicine.

Only the SCCM didn't say that. At all. Let's see what it did say...

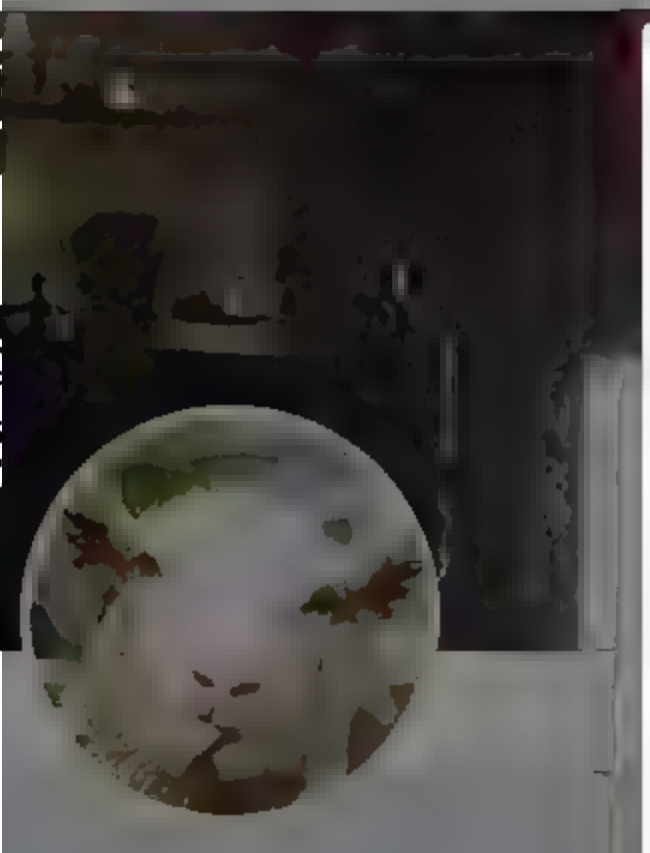
Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone



The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

that treated losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

Philip Bump ✓ @pbump
A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" Instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

1/ Look, I get why people were so scared three or four weeks ago. I was too. But now - for the media to ignore the real demographics and scare people with outlier cases - to ignore the mostly empty hospitals all over the country - to pretend that the models weren't wrong...

Alex Berenson

2/ And to refuse to ask really hard questions about what that means about them and the efficacy or lack thereof of the lockdowns - to refuse to ask for hard metrics we will use to reopen the country...

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

7/ But before we can have that debate, everyone needs to underestimate that the models didn't fail last week because they UNDERESTIMATED the effect of the lockdowns. They failed because they OVERESTIMATED the effect. Anyone who says otherwise just doesn't understand the lag.

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

Hey, [redacted] just admitted his predictions from last month and March were wrong! Thanks, Jamelle. Takes courage to admit your mistakes. I too was wrong to trust the IHME model (which is where that 40K (not 20) figure you reference comes from) in any way. Thanks for reminding me.

Also, I will admit that at the time I failed to understand the dynamics of hyper-aggressive death coding (we've already seen Colorado revise its totals down ~25%) or the carnage in the nursing homes that failed policies in NY/MA/PA and other states caused in March and April.

Thanks for reminding me! I never said we'd end at 20,000 deaths. And NYC deaths peaked in early April. But elsewhere the plateau went on longer (though hard to say how much of the numbers in the last month are due to coding, backdating, etc. Hope we find out eventually)...

> Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson
> 3/ Suppose the president is right. And this is the "toughest week." And we average 1,500 deaths a day. That gets us to almost 20,000 deaths by April 12. By then the trend should clearly be down, I don't think it will be arguable...

Deaths are both overcounted and undercounted. The official count is probably overcounted due to "probable" cases, but the number of overcounted deaths is likely much smaller than the number of deaths that have never been counted

At least 252 people have died from COVID-19 in Boston's nursing homes and assisted living facilities. The fatalities account for 48% of the city's coronavirus-related deaths, Mayor Marty Walsh said Monday — a figure he called "devastating."

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Seguir

2/ And, btw, other possibly relevant factors, like, oh, COPD, are considered secondary. The rules "are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not."

The @[redacted] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The [redacted] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

The @IHME_UW model vs reality for New York State, April 5. The model is less accurate than ever. 69K beds projected, 16.5K actually needed; 12,346 ICU beds projected, 4376 needed. Even better (tho not for the model), overall bed count rose less than 600 statewide - less than 4%.

Cuomo when asked today about still needing 110k beds-"The number of beds doesn't really matter anymore. We have the beds. It's the ventilators, and then it's the staff." After going on about NY sharing v's from upstate to downstate, he admitted they haven't moved any yet.

1/ [illegible] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [illegible] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

59 172 422

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So [redacted] has a big story right now about a [redacted] model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

1/ [redacted] appears to have updated its model: It has cut the number of hospital beds needed for [redacted] patients on the peak of April by 45% - from 262,000 to 141,000 and ICU beds by 26% - from almost 39,700 to 29,200. Yet deaths remain almost the same, around 80,000...

2/ Unfortunately, though the model updated just now, its projections remain inaccurate for actual use TODAY: for example, it predicts New York state on April 5 will need 24,000 beds and 6,000 ICU beds, about 1/3 more than the actual usage today. Not sure what to say about this...

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

Coronavirus

Cuomo on plan to take ventilators: We're not in the position that we were in that feared losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

1/ #COVID—19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."

about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

So, to be clear, are you acknowledging your initial tweet was incorrect and that the earlier version of the model did explicitly account for the lockdowns?

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

Did the models for hospitalizations and deaths account for millions of hydroxychloroquine pills sent to NY and taken and work?

So @nytimes has a big story right now about a @fema model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the [redacted] projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

Wow. So this is a non-random sample and only one data point, but at a testing site in Chicago 30-50% of people are testing positive for CV antibodies (meaning they have already had the virus). WE NEED WIDESPREAD ANTIBODY TESTING.

1/ So I don't want to go too far down the hole of arguing about #COVID death counts, but a reader pointed out a very odd change to the way Massachusetts is reporting deaths. Until April 6, the state reported deaths by day - that day, it reported 29. See below..

Long-Term Care Facilities Reporting At Least One Case of COVID-19	119
Hospitalization
Patient was hospitalized	1241
Patient was not hospitalized	3942
Under Investigation	8654

These data are cumulative and current as of April 6, 2020 at 12:30PM
*Reflects improved facility definitions and data collection. These include positive cases at nursing homes, rest homes, and skilled nursing facilities.

The level of anger is "alarming"? What now? As far as I can see, no one threatens him verbally or tries to physically intimidate him, much less raises a hand, although someone people do curse and yell. Ever seen a protest or angry people before, @kevinvesey?

Only the SCCM didn't say that. At all. Let's see what it did say...

"[One estimate is that 1/2 of] ICU admissions (960,000) would require ventilatory support. Such projections are gross estimates."

More importantly: this is everyone who may need ventilation OVER THE COURSE OF THE EPIDEMIC...

6/ Final point: the paper concludes the real bottleneck is in trained staff and "priority should focus not only on increasing [ventilators]... but on growing the number of trained professionals."

But I guess bashing the WH for not nationalizing ventilator production is more fun.

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

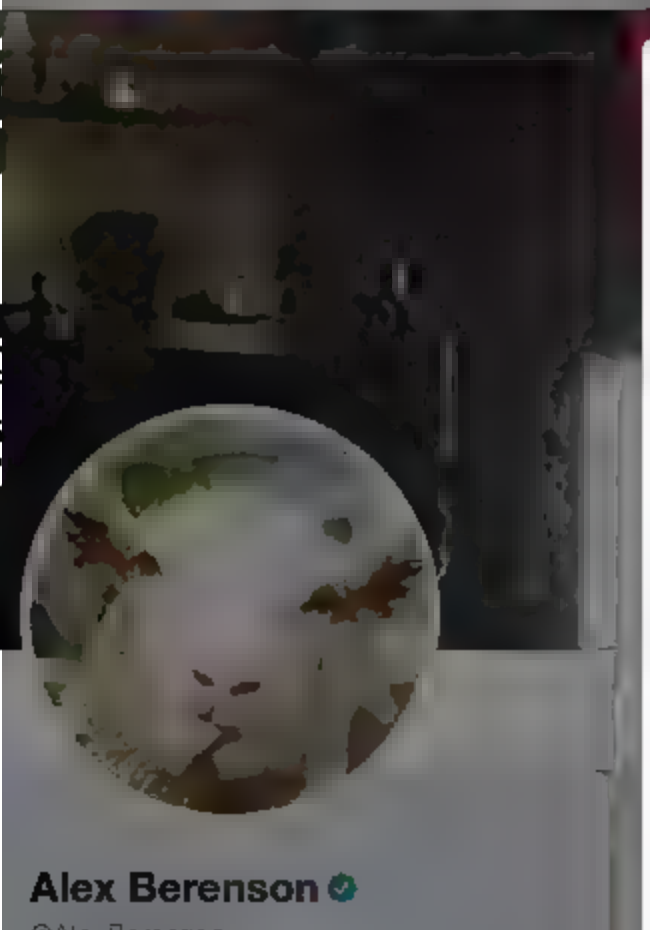
New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.



When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

This is the @IMHE_UW model for #Covid_19, the new US standard. It was put out SIX days ago (post lockdown). It projects New York State will have 50,000 hospitalizations TODAY. Instead NYS has 12,000. Wrong by 4x in under a week. What on earth are we doing? covid19.healthdata.org/projections

The @[redacted] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

1/ Now California is sending back extra ventilators too... As I mentioned a couple weeks ago, any new ventilators we build at this point will likely be very expensive furniture. We don't have the docs and nurses to run them and we don't need them anyway:

2/ One would think the fact all three West Coast states have decided they don't need more of the most crucial piece of equipment in treating serious #CV cases would lead reporters to ask hard questions about the projected course of the epidemic - and lockdowns. One would think.

I saw that in Cuomo yesterday. Plus, Trump has his fingers all over this mess. He failed to follow his gut and instead listened to these doctors who have not treated a patient in decades. What a debacle they caused.

I worked for Nielsen Media and they have "random" models that are very capable of doing this with a great deal of accuracy. They work in a multi billion dollar industry where absolute accurately counts.

So @NYGovCuomo has reported ICU patients and discharges for weeks. Not today. Just new hospitalizations - which are now 2/5 what they were a week ago - and deaths (a lagging indicator, as he said). I wonder why. And, oh yeah, a promise NY won't go back to normal anytime soon.

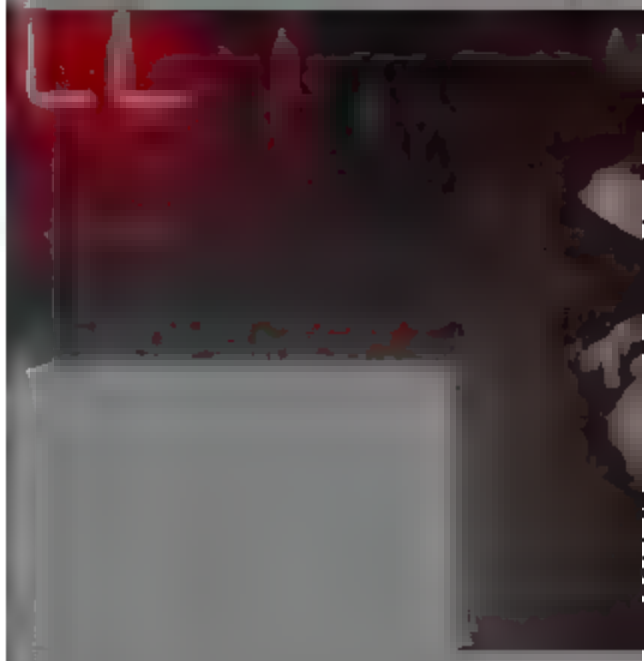
1/ #COVID-19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."



about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

Segueix

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

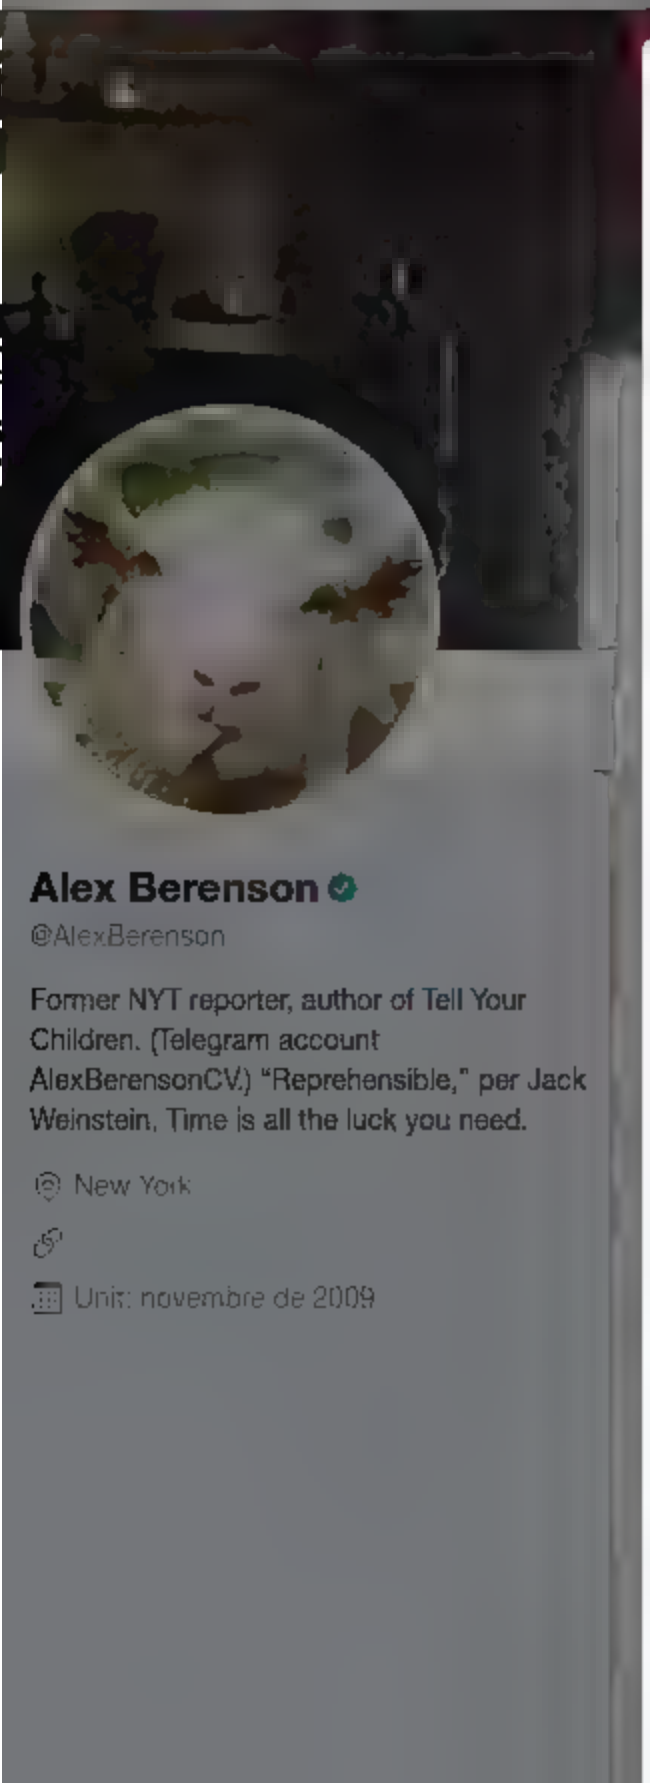
3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 d'abr.



4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 d'abr.

1/ I'm going to try to explain this once more for all the blue-checks insisting that they KNOW lockdowns work.

The models failed. In real time. Even in NY state, the April 1 iteration of [illegible] model estimated four times the hospitalizations last week as were taking place.

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

2/ But it's crucial to understand WHY they failed.

There is a TIME LAG between infection, symptoms, hospitalization, ICU care, and death. 5 days on average from infection to symptoms, several more days to hospitalization, 2-3 more to ICU care. These are averages, but correct.

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Expect it to NOT be over, because social capital has been bet.
- Doubling downs
- Claims of "success!" for the lockdowns
- Jeers at the "deniers" for almost killing everyone

The hysteria will remain, and probably find its way into the history books as truth.

that treated losing ventilators and other equipment to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's plan to take unused supplies may not have as much to worry about.

"We're not in the position that we were in," Cuomo said today during a press briefing in Albany.

He had said Friday he planned to sign an executive ordering requiring hospitals to give up unused ventilators and other medical gear. He said he would to deploy the National Guard to collect the supplies and redistribute them to hospitals stressed by the coronavirus pandemic in the New York City area.

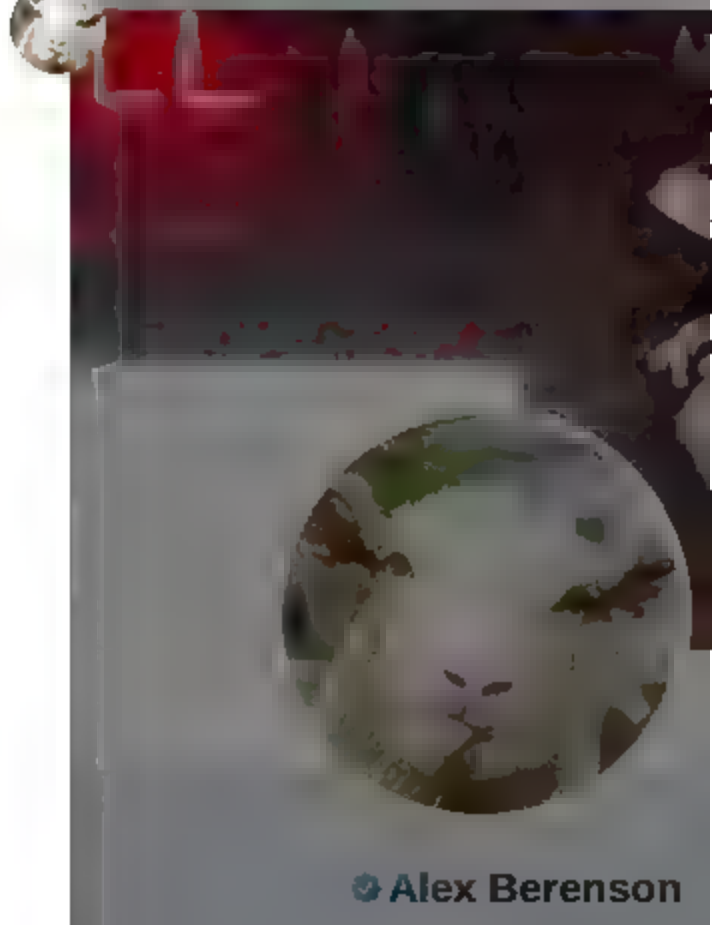
1/ #COVID--19 is devastating hospitals and employees nationally. But not for the reason you think. They are empty - prepared for a surge that has not come - and burning cash. An executive reports his group's stronger hospitals have "months" of cash; the weaker ones have "weeks."



about 15 other CFOs

- Seeing decline in volume about 40% and similar revenue cut – his low was about 50% cut in volume but only about 2-5% COVID
- Outpatient basically is a zero
- Only exception is hot spots which have a lot of volume but much lower revenue and higher cost because of PPE
- A reasonable way to think about it is down 40-60% at the peak
- No one expects to recapture everything they lost
- Staff
  - Not flexing yet
  - Post spike in likely have to make some adjustments
  - Could take 40% off of earnings and need to reduce staffing by 10% but not close to enough
- Longer term impact

field hospital deployed to CenturyLink Field Event Center to the U.S. Department of Defense.

The 250-bed facility, for which setup began on March 30, was intended to help Washington state's health care system tend to non Covid-19 patients in the event of a hospital surge.

But just three days after announcing the facility was ready to receive patients, officials say they're returning the hospital to the federal government.

The action is aimed at helping another state with a more significant need for hospital capacity at this time, according to the Governor's Office. The facility did not see any patients during the time it was slated to operate in Seattle.

3/ The models assumed (not unreasonably) that in places like New York, lockdowns had come TOO LATE. Between March 17 and March 25, hospitalizations in NY rose 7X. The models assumed that because of the time lag, the rise would go on UNTIL THE EFFECTS OF THE LOCKDOWN KICKED IN...

११ ३४२ ५५३

Alex Berenson
@AlexBerenson

4/ By that point, >5,000 new patients every day would need hospitalization - and ultimately New York would need 140,000 hospital beds and 30,000-40,000 ventilators. (Remember those numbers?)

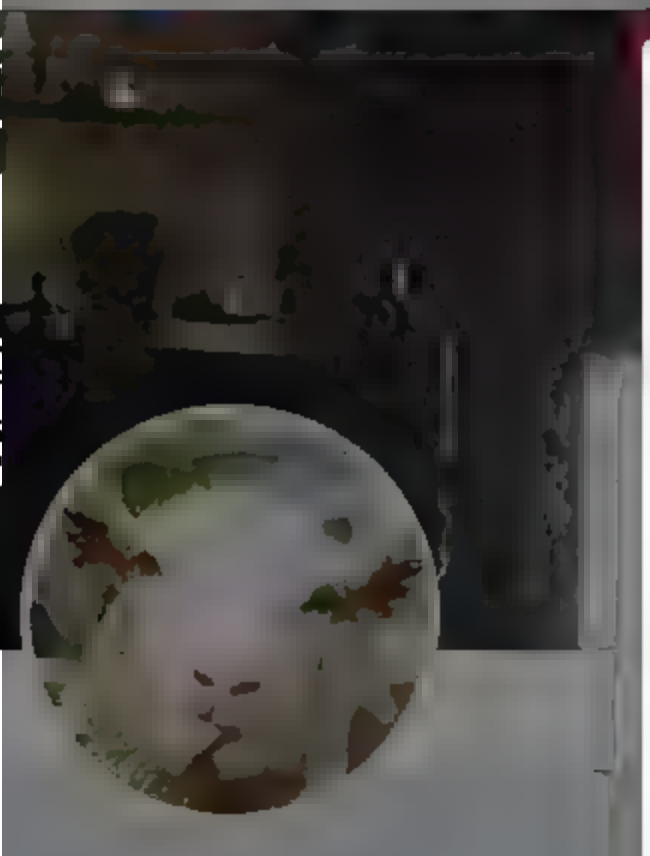
5/ BUT THE MODELS WERE WRONG. After March 25, new hospitalizations remained roughly flat in NY for the next 10 days. Now they have plunged. That's why the overflow in NYC is basically empty. (Outside NY, the trends are similar, and it doesn't matter when the lockdowns started.)



१२ १६८ ६०९

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · १० एप्रि

6/ Now, there are several possible reasonable arguments around this, including that voluntary social distancing had some effect before the lockdown. And there's a much broader question as to what is happening right now in Spain and Italy – or Japan, or Sweden.

So [redacted] has a big story right now about a [redacted] model showing up to 300,000 deaths. The documents are "dated April 9," the story says. So they must account for everything we've learned this week - which would be bad news. But what the chart actually says: "Models from 3/31."

spike in infections if shelter in place orders are lifted at 30 days.

Stay-at-home orders, school closures and social distancing greatly reduce infections of the coronavirus, but lifting those restrictions after just 30 days will lead to a dramatic infection spike this summer and death tolls that would rival doing nothing, government projections indicate.

The projections obtained by The New York Times come from the departments of Homeland Security and Health and Human Services. The models use three scenarios. The first has policymakers doing nothing to mitigate the spread of the coronavirus. The

You may understand why this matters - but if not - the @HME_UW projections have been changed THREE times since March 31 (resulting in sharp cuts in hospitalization/ICU projections). If this were actually made yesterday, it would be frightening. Instead it's just out of date.

Yep, Feb. 22 - I was early to warn. Then more data arrived. Pointing out I was very worried about #COVID early on - when many media types were barely paying attention and/or arguing we shouldn't overreact/have a travel ban might be the worst possible way to argue I'm wrong now.

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.

Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

The @[illegible] model vs. reality for New York State, April 4: more of the same, 65,400 beds projected, 15,905 actually used (new hospitalizations fell notably day-over-day); 12,000 ICU beds projected, 4,100 used. Still basically fiction, but at least it's not getting MORE wrong.

3/ Only Ohio didn't actually issue a lockdown order until Monday, March 23. Yes, lockdowns are such magic that they can PREVENT (theoretical) peaks that occurred before they were issued...

during his daily news conference to update the spread of the COVID-19 coronavirus, stating that ODH Director Dr. Amy Acton has signed the order.

"There is really nothing in that order, that we have not already been talking about," said DeWine. "There's nothing in that order, that I have not been asking you to do for the last week or so."

The order goes into effect at 11:59 p.m. Monday and will go until at least April 6. Then it will be reevaluated, according to DeWine.

DeWine stated that the ODH website would have more information when it was available.

You're conflating social distancing with the lockdown order. Social distancing was occurring before it.

As an Ohioian, I am so disgusted with how this whole thing has been handled. They bought Acton's "act" hook-line-and-sinker. When will DeWine realize that the stupid exec orders are no longer necessary & get Ohio back to work? Probably never, he is drunk on the praise over this!

I'd be interested to know how much praise he's getting..maybe from the media but that's to be expected. I'm starting to see a shift in attitude towards this. The mantra is starting to get old and people want their jobs and lives

Time to start using more straightforward language and calling out people who don't tell the truth, like @pbump. The original model explicitly accounted for the effect of lockdowns. It was wrong in real-time, embarrassingly so; that's why it's been updated. (It's still wrong.)

@pbump Philip Bump

A notable shift downward in projected deaths from coronavirus is already being spun as "experts were wrong!!" instead of "hey, the thing experts said would drive down deaths might be driving down deaths."

it's as if MSM is willfully ignorant of the difference between social distancing and complete lockdown; a supposed statewide "lock down" went into effect here in GA last Friday, after the heat just became too much for our governor, but almost nothing changed!

Unemployment will stay through the roof as $600 supplement through July 31 cripples small businesses long after covid19 is a memory. Few will be willing to work for significantly less than they make on their couch. Much bigger threat to businesses than covid19 ever was!

In a time of pandemic, another rural hospital shuts its doors remote pocket of West Virginia, Williamson Memorial did not treat any patients with COVID-19 — so far, the county of 23,400 residents has confirmed just three cases and one death. But the hospital's net revenue was slashed in half as administrators halted nonessential procedures and visits to the emergency room plummeted from about 800 to 300 a month.

And so this former mining town, nestled

Btw: the article itself says "most" children with the syndrome (it is not more precise) had either an active #COVID infection or antibodies. Which, given that at least 25% of people in NYC have antibodies (probably higher, I've gone into this elsewhere) is hardly surprising.

> clue, but others with similar symptoms had negative diagnostic test results, Dr. Connors said. The doctors then decided to check the other children for evidence of the coronavirus with a different test, one for antibodies, which signal they had an earlier, no-longer-active infection. Most children ended up having either a positive diagnostic or antibody test result.

1/ A pediatrician in Michigan sends this note putting the inflammatory syndrome in context - it's long but worth reading. I hope other peds or inflammatory disease experts will add their thoughts - I really appreciate physicians sharing their time and expertise.

> I'm the pediatrician in Michigan who emailed you > is easily met by our urgent cares and clinics). You asked in a recent post if there is any plausible mechanism behind Covid19 being responsible for the reported cluster of Kawasaki/multi-system inflammation cases in New York. The answer probably isn't clear cut... yet. The short answer is that there IS a plausible mechanism, though I don't believe it justifies the media panic (very little in medicine truly justifies media panic, right?), and whether there is any true causality will take a long time to determine. Probably beyond when the media will lose interest. If you're interested in the longer answer, keep reading. If not, I understand; I know you're very busy.

pediatricians should always be on the lookout for KD. KD is also rarely fatal, since we have pretty good diagnostic criteria and treatment. The very rare kids who die of KD are likely undiagnosed or misdiagnosed and therefore not treated appropriately. We have also been told to be on the lookout for something else, which does seem to me to be relatively new - this pediatric multi-system inflammatory condition that seems to have a more rapid onset and severe course, is seen in older kids than typical for KD, and progresses to shock (organ damage from poor perfusion). The plausible mechanism here is no different than what I described extensively above - this is an acute autoimmune condition which, like most acute autoimmune conditions, is plausibly preceded and triggered by an infectious illness. Covid-19 is highly Terrifying, right? I'm a pediatrician, and a parent, and this kind of thing is nightmare-inducing. Hundreds of kids felled by a contagious virus with no treatment or vaccine. And we're due for an outbreak of this in fall 2020. Consider though, if schools are closed this fall, will it be because hundreds of kids could be killed or paralyzed by enterovirus D68 (or killed by the flu), or because dozens of kids may get Kawasaki disease? Yes, that kind of truth does hurt, too much to tweet.

Erin, I loved you at CNBC. It was a sweet and informative dance with the wise old man. These days I feel sadness when I watch your show.

Erin was a favorite of mine while on CNBC.
Always positive, always upbeat.
Since CNN, it's as though she's been possessed.

Nice piece here from @seanreade on the many, many catastrophic #COVID predictions that have not come to pass - and the media's habit of ignoring that reality. (He's more polite than I would have been.)

I'd note also that FEW hospitals were overwhelmed in NYC (notably in Queens), while others sat half empty. And no one thought about spreading the patients around all hospitals. Bureaucracy? I'm sure if you could shut most businesses in the city, you could have worked around that.

Parenting - not having children but parenting - makes one an adult more surely than anything else. She may not know what it means to be an adult; that's too bad.

The novelist, who has written six books and seems to have none of Andrea's artistic waywardness, does share some of her character's ambivalence toward growing up. "I still emotionally feel sometimes like a 15-year-old, and sometimes like a 35-year-old, but definitely not like whatever it means to be a 45-year-old," the writer says, laughing. "At the age of 45, there's no turning Purchasing a house was a step in the right direction. "Just in the nick of time!" she jokes. "At the same time," she adds, "it was Mardi Gras three days ago, and I was doing Jello shots at 6:30 a.m. To be fair, so was everybody else in New Orleans."

The point is: "Nobody knows what it means to be an adult. When I'm 60, I'm probably going to be doing Jello shots, maybe at nine in the morning. I don't

So by using your definition, I am not an adult because after multiple miscarriages we were unable to have children.

Do you understand how deeply offensive that is? More importantly, do you care? Would your consider your children non-adults if they were in my shoes one day?

Hey Alex, This article refers to retesting people who have recovered, as they are no longer infectious. This is different from people who have not had the virus, were in contact with a case and are asymptomatic. They should still be tested.

The article you posted has nothing to do with the above situation. It's debunking the "reinfection" theory the news were pushing 6 weeks ago.

From a mom in Minnesota. Please read this one to the end. It's a gut punch.

Dear Mr. Berenson - I write to you from Minnesota. I was born and raised here, as was my husband. We have raised our 4 boys here. It's a state I love but it has turned on me. The policies our governor has implemented have destroyed our economy, while those most vulnerable to this virus, have NOT been protected. We have the worst record in the country for deaths in the LTC facilities. This should be the #1 story in our local paper, and on the news - but it's not and that is criminal. Our governor has implemented a draconian stay home order based on faulty models done at the University of MN. But no one talks about it. I have included a link to the models here for your reference:

Then again the WaPo ran this sneering, disgustingly fact-free piece about Georgia on Sunday (see where it discussed the real hospitalization trend? Me neither), plus this ridiculous op-ed this morning, so Dana's probably in line for an @Amazon-funded raise.

Hospitalized [illegible] patients in Georgia down another 21% in 10 days, 34% this month. At this point the onus is on the governor of any lockdown state to explain why it's not following the Georgia model.

> Governor Brian P. Kemp @GovKemp
> Today marks the lowest number of COVID-19 positive patients hospitalized in Georgia at 986. That's down 34% since May 1st.
> These numbers are encouraging, but we must remain vigilant in our efforts

CORRECTION: The actual drop since May 9 was ~18%, not 21%. Sloppy.

1/ Sorry, where's the evidence that lockdowns have saved lives? Even putting all other public health harms from lockdowns aside, the states and countries that locked down earliest and hardest have generally suffered the most #COVID deaths...

2/ Further, there's a very plausible case that driving people indoors likely increases transmission at least in the short run, and that lockdowns as a whole distract government and public health attention from nursing homes, which have the most vulnerable populations...

Alex Berenson ✓ @AlexBerenson · 4m

3/ As for voluntary social distancing, it does seem to slow transmission and thus, yep, flatten the curve, but ultimately everyone gets infected anyway (by everyone I mean 40-80% of everyone, since many people seem to have natural immunity, more proof this isn't Captain Trips)...

The pro lockdown pundits conveniently ignore all the deaths that these extended lockdown measures will cause from suicide,anxiety, and economic despair!

Also, because we flattened the curve, those at risk have to stay isolated even longer.

Yeah, thanks for sharing. We discussed this already. The study is fiction. The way to judge if lockdowns work is not to model them - but to run real-world tests, ideally by turning them off and on; we are running those tests now, and they show no evidence lockdowns are effective.

BTW - a less ideal but still decent way to judge the lockdowns is to compare places that locked down with those that didn't; those real-world tests also provide, at best, very limited proof that lockdowns have ANY positive benefit (less than I would have imagined, honestly).

Illinois State Police

During the COVID-19 pandemic, the Illinois State Police (ISP) continues to focus on community caretaking, educating citizens and businesses and urging voluntary compliance.

As part of that effort, the ISP will act incrementally to urge compliance of the executive order.
Consistent with this community spirit and with state law, policy guidance and discretion, the Illinois State Police will not issue any criminal misdemeanors to individuals for violations of temporary emergency rules or executive orders.

The Illinois State Police will only apply those emergency rules to entities such as corporations, LLPs or other business entities consistent with state and constitutional law. No individual will be arrested or taken to jail for a violation of the Executive Orders or emergency rules. We

Schools have to reopen completely AND STAY OPEN.
Asymptomatic testing cannot be required.
Mandatory family quarantines REALLY cannot be required (and individual quarantines shouldn't be, given the risk profile).
Masks... we can debate.

Did the Times include how Florida's covid numbers are fake and Governor DeSantis has the worst covid poll numbers of any Governor? The Associated Press concluded that Florida's unemployment payouts are the WORST in the nation. Your homophobia and racism about doesn't change that

Let's try it with #COVID! Add "in nursing homes" to new public health "rules."

No mass events (in nursing homes).
Universal masks (in nursing homes).
Weekly tests (in nursing homes).

No universal testing (yet), and it's not clear that anyone could, though public health authorities could put heavy pressure on businesses to force employees to be tested.

But masks, yes. Many states are requiring them.

It gets easy to become "prophetic" when the people in charge are so predictable. I live in a Texas County where UT predicted 100k cases by early June. We haven't reached 500 yet, and zero yesterday. I predicted this two months ago. Questioning epidemiology as a valid science.

Randy Otto @r_c_otto · 11m
I even monetized it. I won a $100 bottle of Scotch off a colleague, who based on a model he himself had built, had predicted 140,000 case in Alberta at the end of April. I called BS and squeaked out a victory by 135,000 cases.

Voters in swing states are sharply divided along partisan lines over the coronavirus pandemic with just under six months to go before Election Day, according to a new CNBC/Change Research poll.

Democrats and Republicans in the key electoral states of Arizona, Florida, Michigan, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin disagree over whether there is likely to be a second wave of Covid-19 all the battleground voters surveyed, including a 41%-32% lead among independents. He also leads Biden 51%-40% in who would do a better job handling the economy. The two are in a statistical tie over who would do a better job handling coronavirus.

But the survey results also showed that independents are far more likely than Trump to be concerned about a potential second wave in coronavirus infections and will blame Trump if it does.

I wanted to believe this was a joke or a hoax - @raleighpolice calling a protest a "non-essential activity" and arresting someone for speaking out against the state's lockdown. But it is as real as Stalin.

The #ReopenNC protest that occurred in Downtown Raleigh today has been cleared. We explained to the protestors that at this time, they are not allowed to protest. It is a non-essential activity and violates the Governor's Executive Order.

There was one arrest made by the State Capitol Police.

POLITICS & GOVERNMENT

Protesters rally for NC to reopen. At least one is arrested for failing to disperse.

It's actually the opposite. Only about 8 percent of "flu" deaths come with a positive test for influenza. The rest are just estimates of pneumonia and other "flu related symptom" deaths. So when we say 40,000 die of flu each year that's not accurate. Very inflated figure.

1/ From a German (Bavarian) reader, and well worth reading in full. This is clearly (at best) where the lockdown states in the US are going without extreme public pressure. "We are living in a dystopian reality." Important point: large protests have been forbidden.

Just to set things in perspective: As of today Germany has ~10k active cases in a population von 83 million! Despite feverishly testing, they reported only 460 new cases yesterday. Testing capacity is at a little bit over 1 million per week (160,000 per day) but tests conducted only reach about 425,000 for week 20. Clearly the epidemic is over, no matter what. Right now the number of new cases are statistically not even distinguishable from false-positives (assuming the PCR-test is very, very good, with a specitivity of 99% - which we do not know, since they are in-house validated).

A lot has changed during the last month weeks here in Germany, albeit not necessarily to the better.

And if you think I'm kidding about the gunshot wounds, here's a @seattletimes piece (supposedly about undercounting deaths, of course the real news is buried halfway down); about 10% of WA's reported deaths have no plausible #COVID connection, including 5 GSWs.

> already in the system after testing positive for the virus, she said.

As for the promises from Apple and Google that their contact tracing information will only be available to public health authorities? Said authorities already share positive #COVID test results with police (hard to believe HIPAA allows this, but it must).

Getting to 100,000 US deaths. In four main categories:

1: Positive test unrelated to manner of death (alcohol poisoning, gunshot wounds!);
2: Very old/ill people dying with COVID;
3: Iatrogenic (hello NYC ventilators);
4: COVID-caused.

Anyone care to guess at the percentages?

For my oldest daughter, being an elementary school pupil of 2nd grade, the outlook is no way better. such silly guidelines, every school developed an individual regime to somehow magically comply to the rules. So some schools conduct alternating visits on a day basis (meaning one week they attend Mo, We, Fr and the other Tu and Th). Others are alternating on a weekly basis and a third model just cuts the daily schedule in half, resulting in one part of the class attending school from 08-10 and the other from 10-12. Naturally non of our brilliant politicians asks, how in hell a family with both parents working is coping with that. Not even to mention the damage it causes to our children's education and even worse their mental health.

From a mom of an Illinois teenager: "Things continue to spiral down for my daughter." (Both mother and daughter are okay with my using their names, but I'm not doing so because I'd rather protect the daughter in case she has second thoughts.)

A bit of background. I am a single mom who has sole custody of my 17 year old daughter. Just the two of us. I am also a statistician so I tend to approach risks, life in a very analytical fashion.

My daughter was an exchange student this academic year (she's a junior in HS). Was studying abroad in Switzerland. Because of C19 she came home quickly and unexpectedly 3/17. She was supposed to be in Switzerland until early July, which is when they finish their academic school year.

Upon arriving home, she SQed for 2 weeks....thinking that once she was done she could reconnect with her friends in the US and to get back on track with being a teen. Didn't work out that way.

On Memorial Day, we recall our war dead. A good time to remind everyone:

In March, governors and health officials took our freedom by exaggerating the risks of #SarsCov2.

Now they want to trade it back for masks and contact tracing and made-up rules.

No. Never.

Sad thing is she doesn't have to pay the price in Nov because she isn't up for re election. This will be forgotten by the time she has to run again.

These old propaganda posters are amazing - especially that first one, which says people should wear masks outside all the time. I can't believe anyone actually went for that.

this weekend, Mask Up! reminds New Jerseyans that we can do both: enjoy outdoors and keep our communities safe during the COVID-19 public health emergency," said Governor Murphy. "Communities across the state can share in our campaign to encourage their residents and visitors to wear a face covering to prevent the further spread of the virus."

Unfortunately given the new HCQ results it's hard to argue anyone should be promoting HCQ. And I think non-physicians should try to leave specific medical decisions to MDs except in rare circumstances (yes, I've questioned ventilator use).

Alex, which results? The problematic ones touted by the NYT?

We should apply the same rigor to evaluating HCQ as to lockdown, data, models, etc. The HCQ conversation has become politicized, pharma has had a bias against it, and there have been problems with the studies.

Agreed, where is the evidence HCQ doesn't work? Or that a drug in use for over 60 years is now harmful?

Reefer Madness! The marijuanas! Hey @cassandrarules, yeah, it's hilarious the way high-THC products can break healthy 20-somethings in months. Just hilarious. Try not to be a stupid, huh?

Your book came out right at the time my 25 year old niece had her first psychotic "break" after heavy marijuana use. She had graduated college with honors 6 months before then broke up with a boyfriend and started using heavy. Now she's been diagnosed with bipolar disorder. I can't help but feel that if she had not used marijuana she would not have had this break.

It has been a nightmare. She's been Baker Acted twice. Finally after 3 psych unit admissions and the help of some amazing people she's not using and we have our [redacted] back. We constantly fear a relapse. We were so ignorant to this issue. Like so many we thought "it's just marijuana". Having spoken to the cops and psych staff at [redacted] they opened our eyes to this horrible issue then your book confirmed it. I'm so grateful to you and your wife and your work and all the research you did. I hope this helps to promote additional research and public awareness. When we got to my niece in [redacted] to assess her, she had taken all the knives out of the knife block and put them

Marijuana is weed from the devils garden! Reefer madness, man!

Ingesting just one marijuana will turn you into a mass shooter! Just say no kids.

These old propaganda posters are amazing - especially that first one, which says people should wear masks outside all the time. I can't believe anyone actually went for that.

...this weekend, Mask Up! reminds New Jerseyans that we can do both: enjoy outdoors and keep our communities safe during the COVID-19 public health emergency," said Governor Murphy. "Communities across the state can share in our campaign to encourage their residents and visitors to wear a face covering to prevent the further spread of the virus."

The more I read @nygovcuomo's tweet, the more amazing it becomes. Shouldn't a public health measure be about HEALTH? No, this is about RESPECT. And the anger he reveals - why must I keep telling you, plebes, why is it "necessary," why do you not listen? - is so ugly.

The sixth name on the @nytimes front page list of #COVID victims is apparently a homicide death. Man #SarsCov2 is nasty.

Serious question: anyone wonder how far down the list one would have to go to find the first "gunshot wound" or "alcohol poisoning" death? I'm not going to bother, but unless these names were vetted very carefully (unlikely - the job would be huge), probably not too far.

April. Even before requesting the public, especially in the seven designated prefectures, to stay home as much as possible, Abe asked elementary, junior high and high schools nationwide to shut for about one month from early March through the end of the spring break.

The data, covering public, state-run and private educational institutions from preschools through high schools, showed that 55 percent in the other 40 prefectures started the new term.

Also: weirdly, there is evidence that the actual rates of #SarsCov2 infection are more or less the same in Japan as much of Europe - 3% by early April. Which raises the question: why did almost no one die in Japan? Lots of answers, none good for lockdowns.

@AlexBerenson

> Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110...

Lolcatz expertly prepared. Japan ran almost no tests, didn't bother with a lockdown, and couldn't even quarantine the Diamond Princess right (screenshots on next tweet). People like you have been screaming wait two weeks about Tokyo since February...

Here's what Japan has: really low levels of obesity and a general tendency to social distancing, with masks for sick people. Apparently that'll do it!

If airlines continue this week's passenger re-growth rate, they will be back humming in 8-9 weeks. I suspect they will not be able to handle it, given their disassembled state today.

Take this week compared to last week. Factor is about 1.25-1.3. If that is maintained it will be back to 2M in 8-9 weeks. Airlines probably couldn't handle it since their schedules are so obliterated.

To understand the fibs and elisions Team Apocalypse is now using in its rearguard action to keep lockdowns alive, I want to run through this much retweeted thread from a (very liberal) physician who has aggressively fought against ending lockdowns...

> Megan Ranney MD MPH @meganranney
> Here's a short list of things we do and don't yet know about #COVID19.

For example, on April 15, she tweeted that ending them would cause [illegible] to spread "to an extent that will make our current infection & death rate laughable." Obviously, what's happened in Georgia and much of Europe make that statement ridiculous. So what's her argument now?

2 7 77

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 9m

While the hysterics on Team Apocalypse still scream "WAIT TWO WEEKS," the more sophisticated now have a different argument: "There's so much we don't know" (and thus, implicitly, we can't take any chances).

Except: four months into this epidemic, there's so much we do know...

Dr. Ranney writes we don't know the infection fatality rate, but [redacted] pegged it this week at about 0.25% - about 1 in 400 people. (A reasonable range is 0.15% to 0.4%.)

Arguably even more importantly, we know exactly WHO dies from [redacted], a fact Dr. Ranney never mentions.

Deaths are stratified by age in a way the media and health authorities STILL won't make clear; people over 80 account for more than half the deaths worldwide and have a risk of death that is 100x or more as high as those under 50. People under 40 have almost no risk from #COVID.

To fail to discuss this reality is to elide the most basic truth about [redacted] - it is less dangerous than the flu for young people and probably no more dangerous for the middle-aged...

So what does Dr. Ranney say we DO know? "Masks work." Well, no, we actually DON'T know that. Masks cut the risk of infection for people treating the sick in close quarters, and they may help keep the sick from infecting others... but we

So many of us not-lockdown people just wanted to devote massive resources to protecting the, uh, "olds", which we could have done with the effort we put towards blanket lockdown!

mortality rate doesn't say anything about long term organ damage for those who required hospitalization and recovered

While the hysterics on Team Apocalypse still scream "WAIT TWO WEEKS," the more sophisticated now have a different argument: "There's so much we don't know" (and thus, implicitly, we can't take any chances).

Except: four months into this epidemic, there's so much we do know...

Then she adds we don't know exactly how to treat [illegible] - basically true. But what she is trying to do is make the illness seem scarier than it is; we don't have great treatments for the flu either, but we don't need them, bc most people recover on their own. So too with COVID.

(BTW, she never mentions that now that we're not stuffing patients on ventilators as we were two months ago, mortality rates seem to have improved; there is much work left to be done on this story, especially in New York City.)

For example, on April 15, she tweeted that ending them would cause [illegible] to spread "to an extent that will make our current infection & death rate laughable." Obviously, what's happened in Georgia and much of Europe make that statement ridiculous. So what's her argument now?

Then she goes on to say we don't know how long people will remain immune to [redacted]. This is also true, and also a subtle way to make the virus seem scarier than it is - there is little if any reason to believe people will not have substantial immunity.

Then she goes on to the most substantial fib - that we "know to that decrease transmission and deaths," we need "social distancing" (she does not use the term lockdown, but considering that's what we're now in, I can only assume that's what she means) and "testing"...

Sorry, we DON'T know either widespread testing or lockdowns matter to the course of [illegible]; the industrialized country with the mildest epidemic (Japan) has done neither, and transmission rates seem to have DECLINED as lockdowns have ended, though we don't know why...

3 4 14

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 11s
Finally, she writes this: "if you're close to someone who's infected, inside... you too have a high risk of infection."
